The Daily Standard.
Thursday, October 13, 1870.
Victoria and Esquimaux the terminus of the Railway.

The Daily Standard.
Thursday, October 13, 1870.
Victoria and Esquimaux the terminus of the Railway.

We have occasionally alluded to the terminus of the Victoria and Montreal Railway on the Pacific. We again take occasion to draw the attention of our readers to the same subject, and above all others, our Victoria readers. We have good reason for doing so; for if the people of the southern end of Vancouver Island—the inhabitants of Victoria and Esquimaux—do not take measures to provide that the railway shall be extended to this island, they will be very seriously injured. We are not alarmists; but there are grounds and solid reasons for the opinion that if the terms of the Canadian Government down to commencing the western terminus of the Railway at Victoria and Esquimaux, our citizens will never regret it but once, and that will last for a long, very long period. So long indeed, that all those who may have an interest in real estate will forever regret it. The Intercolonial Railway connecting Lower Canada and the Atlantic seaboard of Nova Scotia makes Halifax the eastern terminus. If the Nova Scotians had been content with any intermediate port, they never would have had their capital city made the terminus. We have therefore to be equally practical—the Canadians want this country, and we want Canada; but we only want Canada or such terms as will contribute to our prosperity. Now if the railway be brought to any part of the Mainland without being connected by rail with this city, all who own real estate here will suffer. Under the present circumstances, Victoria is the head—the chief commercial city of British Columbia; but if through apineering, negligence or want of taking proper steps to insure the terminus here, we allow the terminus to be located elsewhere, no one will be to blame but ourselves. We have now our Delegates back from Canada; but will anyone point to a single utterance that they have made officially to the effect that Esquimaux and Victoria shall be the terminus. The Graving Dock was located at Esquimaux in the terms. Why was railway terminus not located at Victoria? The railway is a much more important matter to this city than the Dock. The latter can be built at any time; but let the railway terminus be located elsewhere than here, and Victoria will be reduced to an Agricultural village; and the chief place of trade will be where the freight is taken in or discharged from the cars. The election is high at hand. Several candidates will appear no doubt. Now no candidate ought to be returned by Victoria unless he will pledge himself to vote for Confederation on condition that Victoria be made the terminus. We are aware that there are those who will attempt to undervalue our advice; but let those undervalue it who may think proper. It will not alter the result; and the result will be, that either the railway will benefit or injure this city. We recommend a course that will benefit it. Let those who are content that no effort shall be made to have the terminus here have their way, but let all those who have fixed stake in this place and think differently take warning.
